Q8) What should we keep in mind about the look and feel of this space as we begin designing?

- Warm and inviting open space
- Inviting/loving/peaceful. We don't need more coffee in Austin. We need healthy options for nutrition.
- The design elements supported by the Soul City Corridors Plan.
- High quality materials of design
- High quality and inviting.
- It's on a main road and should stand out with beautiful windows for natural lights.
- Open concept, welcoming, art decor reflective of community
- The children that Lurie serve and the community that Lurie is entering in. What are their immediate needs? What are culturally appropriate protocols/methodologies to ensure that Lurie's presence synchronizes with the neighborhood?

Q8) What should we keep in mind about the look and feel of this space as we begin designing?

- It should be respectful and considerate of the corridor themes already established.
- I think we should keep the community and functionalism at the core. How can we keep the doors of this facility open the same way that Lively Stone has during the pandemic? How can we serve the whole family and have them frequently utilizing this space?
- Make sure you get the residents who live in the community opinions and ideas
- A place where any age person could be comfortable
- Make it inviting and spacious so that sick and well people will be comfortable. Provide trained and caring physicians to service the patients.
- Making sure you are not duplicating efforts from other medical facilities in the area.
- The space should be calming. A very open space
- Lots of natural lighting
- Open space, homey, warm colors, calming colors, spaces to break and relax

Please share any other information, questions, concerns or ideas you have about this project:

- Can this facility be a training/learning facility?
- Health/Fitness is key. We need a community fitness center.
- How do you plan to align this project with existing plans that acknowledge issues in areas you've recognized?
- Please keep partnerships *intentional*
- Should offer wifi.
- Community rooms should include whiteboards
- Space should include art from community youth
- That the hub will not limit access to care/specialist at main hospital or may be viewed as a way to keep people out of main site by finding way to keep in our own community

Please share any other information, questions, concerns or ideas you have about this project:

- I love it and as a resident of Austin for over 25 years- I am elated by this. I am concerned about our future generations and the resources, which are not available to them. I want to see youths thrive and this is possible with economic, educational, and career opportunities. I am a bit concerned about the repetition of services since Austin is a hub for so many non-profits. My hope is that Lurie Hospital will fine-tune every angle of its goals for Austin, so that we are actually gaining a facility that works to follow the projection of children from their education, to their homes, and even work. I hope that the execution of the program will be thorough and consistent, with no child feeling a void of any sort-physically, psychologically, spiritually.
- I would love to have those services flushed out and described with detail to the community, because I'm a bit unclear of the proposal of the services for this project.
- Critical that you connect with other Austin organizations offering related or similar services to the community. We don't need more service silos.
- I feel knowledge is power. A healthy body and mind is the beginning of the process. Having a renown hospital supporting this effort is definitely a great start.
- How will this space be marketed in the community? How will the community be served?
- N/A ( I love this project for the community, it's a big step in the right direction)
- Should have intentional partnerships with local wellness groups.
